A Journey into the Darkness

This anthology embarks on a literary odyssey into the darkest corners of the human psyche. Each play serves as a portal through which we glimpse the complexities of desire, fear, and the fragility of the human condition. These works are not for the faint of heart, but rather for those who dare to confront the shadows that dwell within.

Exploring the Human Condition

"Night Time" delves into the depths of human relationships, laying bare the complexities of love, betrayal, and the search for meaning. Through characters both ordinary and extraordinary, these plays explore the boundaries of our moral compasses, challenging our assumptions and forcing us to confront our own inner demons.

- In "In the Night Time (Before the Sun Rises)," Jonathan Kemp's haunting drama delves into the aftermath of a tragic accident, exposing the raw emotions and fractured relationships of those left behind.
- "Aurora," by Bryony Lavery, paints a chilling portrait of a woman haunted by memories of a time she cannot remember, leaving her questioning her own sanity and the nature of truth.
- Marianna Bogdanova's "The Wilderness" transports us to a remote island where strangers are stranded, forced to confront their darkest secrets and the fragility of civilization.

The Power of Language

Nick Hern Books' "Night Time" is not merely a collection of plays; it is a testament to the transformative power of language. These works showcase the mastery of contemporary playwrights, their ability to craft words that cut through the darkness, illuminating the hidden truths of the human experience.

Each play is a linguistic masterpiece, employing vivid imagery, poetic dialogue, and evocative stage directions to create immersive theatrical experiences that linger in the mind long after the curtain falls.
